1. Define the setting

Agree who the program would serve, where learning would take place, access/device needs, existing support and a named operational owner. Local needs and current resources should be verified with the partner, rather than inferred from unverified statistics.

2. Review the product

Learn2Earn combines adult learning pathways, saved lesson attempts, practice and program-scoped staff workspaces. First-completion evidence and repeated practice remain distinct. The public fictional sample uses the same lesson-card renderer without participant records or rewards.

3. Agree content and incentive operations

Confirm the actual published curriculum, content suitability and qualified review of sensitive information. Set program terms, available manual payment methods, limits, funding and review duties. Approval is not payment; authorized staff record external payment evidence separately.

No price, participant volume, deployment date, grant eligibility, statutory-report compatibility or financial return is promised here.

4. Establish privacy, staff access and support

Review explicit organization/program ownership, staff memberships, MFA, consent, retention and backup/restore. Define who checks support requests, during which hours and with what absence coverage. Saved cases do not notify or dispatch anyone. Optional AI remains gated by qualified review and provider/privacy configuration.

5. Define an honest evaluation

Choose the pilot period and review checkpoints together. Define denominators and date/timezone windows. Report learning participation, practice, recorded service activity and paid incentives separately. Do not infer housing stability, clinical recovery or causation from lesson completion.

6. Decide the next step

Use a scoped conversation to decide readiness, responsibilities, agreements and whether a pilot is appropriate. Any expansion depends on a separate review; access to this deck is not approval.
